Finding paradise. Beaches off the beaten track...

Venezuela's Caribbean coast is one of the most beautiful in the world and there are real gems to be found (see also page 29 for details on Los Roques and Isla Margarita). Morrocay National Park is one of the most popular beach destinations for those living in Caracas, 300km from the capital. The warm waters of the Caribbean lap the shore along this protected coastline.

Even closer lies Choroni, a charming village 3hrs drive from Caracas, and a world away from the hustle and bustle. Beautiful beaches, colonial architecture, and fantastic birdwatching will keep you fascinated.

When thinking of Peru, beaches are not the first thing to spring to mind. However there are some great options from December to February (beach season). El Silencio Beach and Caballeros Beach are the ideal place to unwind after hiking the Andes or traversing the Amazon. And if surfing is your sport and some of the best seafood in the world is to your taste, then look no further.

Almost the same can be said for Ecuador, but once again there are some lovely beaches to enjoy (from December to February). The biggest resort in this part of the world is Salinas around 1.5hrs from Guayaquil where you can relax in the sun or if you're feeling active enjoy the excellent watersport facilities available.

Most visitors to Brazil stay in and around Rio, but there is so much more to discover along its colossal coastline. South of Rio is the state of Santa Catarina, Brazil's surfers paradise. It also has one of the most unspoilt coastlines in the continent with spectacular windswept beaches and forested mountains that spread along the Atlantic coast.

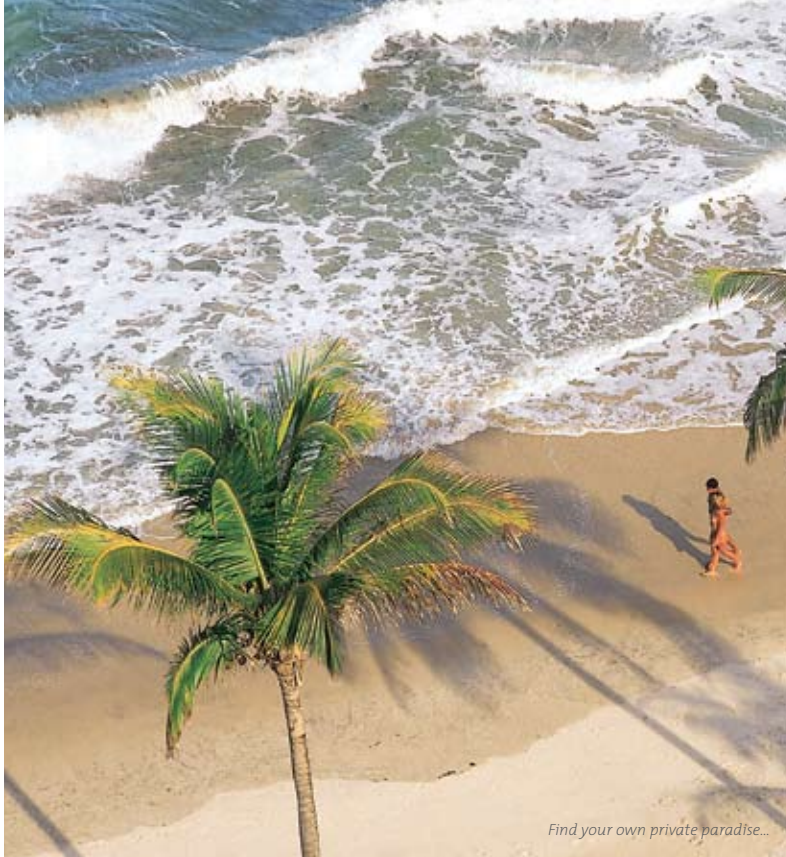

For guaranteed good weather at any time of year, then Bahia is for you. Exotic, intoxicating and full of things to do, this tropical coastline is only a short flight north from Rio or Sao Paulo. Fantastic luxury hotels and intriguing villages and people, Trancoso and Porto Seguro are fast becoming recognised by international visitors, yet still hold onto everything that makes Brazil special.

For an island escape, Fernando de Noronha, is the perfect place. This archipelago, once visited by Charles Darwin, is still one of the most pristine places on the planet and offers visitors incredible close-up encounters with spectacular marine life. A short flight from Recife, Fernando de Noronha still offers the ultimate escape from civilization.

Jericoacoara with its exotic name, is one of the most unique and remote beach destinations in South America. 4hrs from Fortaleza in Brazil's northeast, this coastline is dominated by towering sand dunes and wild open beaches. Famed for its windsurfing and watersports, Jericoacoara is the perfect destination for active travellers.

Varied, exotic, different and full of charm, the beaches of South America are waiting to be explored....
